ODELL'S MAJORITY ELECTION ECHOES

It Goes Above 12,000 Votes in New York.

Republicans in Control of the Legislature Still, and Platt Will Be Senator.

INDIANA'S GOOD SHOWING

IN NEW YORK.

New York, Nov. 6.—Official figures on the vote for governor vary but little from the unofficial reports. According to returns made to the executive at Albany by the several county clerks, the plurality for Odell is 12,887. Only three counties above the Bronx were carried by the Democratic nomination, the aggregate plurality for Odell in these counties being 1,011. This and the Greater New York plurality of 122,074 given to Odell was met and overcome by an up state Republican plurality of 135,972, the difference being a net plurality of 12,887, against 111,126 plurality for Odell in 1900.

Returns of the vote for other state officers are so meager that it is impossible to say if the Democrats have been more successful as regards the minor officers than in the case of the governor. In some quarters it is asserted that by reason of his endorsement by the Prohibitionists Cunneen, the Democratic nominee for attorney general, has made such gains over the head of the ticket that he has been elected.

There are claims that when the returns for judge of the court of appeals are all in it will be found that Judge Gray has defeated his Republican opponent.

The state legislature is controlled by the Republicans by a reduced majority, but one so large as to admit of no doubt of the return of Mr. Platt to the United States senate.

The New York delegation in the lower house of the Fifty-eighth congress will number 37 instead of 34 in the present congress. It will contain 20 Republicans and 17 Democrats, whereas the present delegation stood 22 Republicans and 12 Democrats. All of the more noted members of the delegation have been returned, including Seneca E. Payne, chairman of the ways and means committee.

IN INDIANA.

Indianapolis, Nov. 6.—Estimated pluralities by counties received at state headquarters today indicate the election of the Republican state ticket by 26,000. The Republicans in the legislature will have a plurality of 64 and possibly 65. The senate will probably stand 35 Republicans and 15 Democrats, and the house 72 Republicans.

BARELY ALIVE.

MR. JOHN McNULTY IN A VERY SERIOUS CONDITION.

This afternoon Mr. John McNulty is reported barely alive in his room over the street car office on south Fourth street. He was taken ill last Friday with an attack of gastritis, and has gradually grown worse until his life is now despaired of. There is not a more popular or a better known man in the city than "Col" John McNulty. He is a prominent Elk, and a genial, whole souled fellow whose host of friends will wish for better news from his bedside.

Speaker of the Next House Will Be From Illinois.

The Latest Reports Show the Republicans Still Gaining in Some States.

TODAYS' NEWS BY WIRE

THE NEXT SPEAKER.

Washington, Nov. 6.—Representative Cannon of Illinois in all probability will be the next speaker of the house. This fact is conceded in Washington. The success of Cannon means that Representative Hemmaway of Indiana will have a powerful place as chairman of committee on appropriations. This is one of the best places in the house.

OUT IN NEBRASKA.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 6.—Returns from more than half of the counties show Mickey's plurality will not be less than 5,000. The returns also make it almost certain that McCarthy, in the Third district, and Norris, Republican, in the Fifth district, are elected to congress. This is a gain for the the Republicans of a congressman.

FIGHT OVER A JUDGESHIP.

Louisville, Nov. 6.—There is in prospect a lively fight for the appointment of Judge Barker's successor as judge of criminal court. Unless Judge Barker resigns beforehand the appointment will be for a year, commencing January 1.

Henderson, Nov. 6.—A representative of the American Tobacco Co. has been here conferring with Frederick Gloystern and Co. Rutch as to the purchase of the plant of the Henderson Tobacco Contract Co. This plant is valued at or about $50,000.

REPUBLICANS GOT IT ALL.

Denver, Colo., Nov. 6.—Nearly complete returns show that the Republicans have elected their entire state ticket, with possible exception of superintendents of schools.

CORRECTED RETURNS.

New York, Nov. 6.—Corrected returns received from the state up to this morning make Odell's plurality 11,263.

LABOR PARTY

A Charter Has Been Secured at Springfield.

Hundreds of Laboring Men Are Rallying to Its Support.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—Scarcely had the polls closed Tuesday when an application for a charter was sent to Springfield by representatives of the United Labor party. At a meeting held Monday night it was decided to take out a state charter and immediately begin to make preparations for the spring campaign, when it is proposed to put a complete ticket in the field. The meeting was attended by representative labor men from many unions and all declared that they had come to cut off from both of the old parties and go into the field as labor men. The party will be strictly a workingmen's organization, its constitution providing that only "male wage earners over 21 years of age and citizens of the United States shall be eligible to membership."

Prominent labor men today declared that hundreds of union men of the city were rallying to the support of the new party, and were already using their money and influence to advance its interests. All the meetings of the new party have so far been held in secret, but as soon as the charter arrives publicity will be given the movement.

USED INSULTING LANGUAGE.

Mattie Jackson, white, was arrested this afternoon by Officers Potter and Gourieux for using insulting language in a Court street resort.

BIG FINANCIERS ARE HERE

President Hiland, J. Pierpont Morgan's Western Representative, Looking Over the Iron Furnace

Predicts a Great Success—Says They May Put in a Steel Plant Here Employing 5000 Men.

Mr. W. J. Hiland and Mr. A. D. Plamondon of Chicago, the president and the secretary of the Kentucky Iron Co., owners of the furnaces on Third street, were in the city today looking after the property.

They found everything progressing very satisfactorily and Mr. Finney, the superintendent, gave them the assurance that the furnaces would be ready to blow in about the first of December.

"We have spent a good deal of money getting these furnaces in the right condition," said Mr. Hiland to a Sun reporter this morning, "and have the utmost confidence in the proposition. If we can get coal at the right prices and the right freight rates we will figure on putting in our own coke ovens some time within the next year. We believe from what we know now that iron can be made to yield handsomely at all times at this point, and it is our intention, if we are satisfied that such is the case, to put up a steel plant here at no far distant date that will give employment to probably 4,000 or 5,000 men. The only trouble with this plant before was that it was not run properly. There is no doubt of its being a money making proposition, and as I said we see a great future for us right in your city."

REPUBLICANS IN COVINGTON

WILL CONTROL BOTH BOARDS OF CITY COUNCIL.

Covington, Ky., Nov. 6.—Covington went Republican with a whoop on her municipal ticket. Of all the candidates but one Republican, Lewis Applegate, candidate for council in the First ward, was defeated. The rest of the ticket won by quite handsome majorities, and the Republicans can congratulate themselves on the result, the forerunner, it is believed, of what will happen next year when the more important offices are to be filled. The Republicans will, commencing January 1, control both the board of aldermen and the board of council. The vote on congressional candidates and on the candidates for court of appeals also show a handsome Republican gain, although there remain a few precincts to hear from.

SOME DIDN'T VOTE.

Mr. John Ogilvie, of Milan section of the county, is in the city today. He brought the ballot box in from that precinct and reports the election one of the slowest in many years. He said that a number of voters came but went away and did not vote at all.

properly. There is no doubt of its being a money making proposition, and as I said we see a great future for us right in your city."

Mr. Hiland said he was well pleased with Paducah, and believed it would prove one of the best iron shipping points in the south. It has a big advantage in its proximity to the ore fields and the excellent shipping facilities. The gentlemen returned to Chicago at noon but will return with the other owners of the property when the furnaces are blown in next month.

This should be good news to all Paducah. These gentlemen are men who have made great success in the mining and coal business, men of great means, and they will undoubtedly give the city its best industry.

Mr. Hiland is Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan's western representative, and Mr. Plamondon is a financier of equal prominence and ability.

About December 1 these gentlemen will arrive in Paducah in a private car. With them will be Mr. John Cudahy, the millionaire packer, and Dr. Wirtley, a famous and wealthy surgeon of Chicago. They will remain here several days and it will be Mr. Cudahy's first visit to Paducah.

NOT YET SERVED.

BUT A WARRANT HAS BEEN ISSUED AGAINST DR. BRIGGS.

Rev. G. W. Briggs, pastor of the Broadway M. E. church, has been warranted by Judge Sanders on a charge of maliciously cutting T. J. Garr, proprietor of The Inn, but the reverend gentleman has not yet been summoned, as he is out of the city and the warrant has not been served. The bond indorsed on the warrant is $300.

Mr. Garr was unable to get out only a day or two, and yesterday he was summoned to appear before Judge Sanders and answer questions. He and Dr. Briggs both, it is understood, desired that the matter be dropped, but the authorities can compel a person to furnish testimony against some one else whenever he can be found. This is how Mr. Garr came to furnish the evidence on which the warrant is based.

The charge is a felony, but Dr. Briggs will probably be allowed to plead guilty to cutting in sudden heat and passion, and be fined $50 or $75 in circuit court when the case goes to trial. The police court has no jurisdiction in such cases.

THE DUAL SYSTEM

Comparatively a Short Time Until Paducah Has Two Telephone Co's

Talk Among Some of Selecting One System for General Use, to Save Costs.

NO TELEPHONE WAR PROBABLE

The time will soon arrive when the dual telephone system will be inaugurated in Paducah for the first time in its history, and already a great many who realize that they will have to patronize both companies in order to get satisfactory service are trying to think up some means of getting along with one phone.

It has been suggested by a prominent physician, who will probably bring it up at one of the doctors' meetings before the new system is completed, that the doctors can avoid the additional expense of two phones by agreeing to use one phone exclusively.

Which system to adopt would of course remain with them to decide, but after they decide they can notify the public which system they use, so it will be generally known that they cannot be communicated with over the other system.

It is understood a number of the merchants are also thinking of some such plan, as no one wants the trouble and expense of having two telephones if it can be avoided.

The people are beginning to talk of the double system as the work on it progresses, but there does not seem to be much prospect of a telephone war. A number of people will use one system and a number the other, and some, among them merchants and professional men, must maintain two telephones in order to get complete service.

It was stated by an official of the Cumberland company that his company, as a rule, simply ignored competitors unless an effort was made to encroach on its rights, and that, so far as he knew, his company would maintain the old rates in Paducah and go on just the same as before; in other words, there will be no cutthroat rate war here.

ANOTHER VOTE

Water Company Will Not Put in Filter Until Contract is Made.

Probable That Another Vote Will Be Taken Next Year on Proposition.

A large number of Paducah's best business men have called at the Water company's office on South Fourth street since yesterday and urged Superintendent Muscoe Burnett to prepare for another vote on the filtration proposition in Paducah at the election next year.

It is believed that the people are thoroughly alive to the importance of this question now, and that it will carry next time. The defeat of the ordinance has served to acquaint many who were ignorant before with the facts in the case, and probably were a vote taken tomorrow the proposition would carry.

The water company, it is certain, will never put in a filtration plant unless it has a contract with the city similar to the one voted on. The people will therefore have to authorize one before we can have filtered water.

The matter will in the meantime probably remain in statu quo.

MRS. CALDWELL HURT.

Mrs. S. B. Caldwell, while walking across her bedroom last evening fell and injured her hip. Dr. Taylor was called and administered medical treatment. The hip was injured in such a way that it is a hard matter to determine whether or not the bone is fractured. Mrs. Caldwell is about 75 years of age and on account of her years the accident is doubly unfortunate. Her friends will regret to learn the news.

TWO FROM PADUCAH

Negroes Attempt to Shoot Conductor Arnn at Bardwell.

All Arrested—Official Inspection of I. C. Property Here on November 11.

LATEST RAILROAD NEWS

Illinois Central Conductor Arnn had a rough experience with negro toughs at Bardwell yesterday. Three of them got aboard his train and when ordered off one drew a pistol, but the conductor put them off just the same. Upon reaching Fulton the conductor gave Special Agent Walker a description of them and he arrested them.

The negroes gave their name as Dock Jackson, Charles Brown, of Paducah, and Ed Campbell, of New Orleans. They came to Fulton on a freight that followed Arnn's train. They were searched and a big Colt's pistol was found on one of them. They were taken to Bardwell for trial.

This morning official notice of the arrival of the annual Illinois Central inspection train was received by Agent John Donovan who in turn notified all the different departments of the local system with instructions to begin immediate improvements.

All the windows of the depot, shops, freight house and all other buildings of the local system will have to be thoroughly cleaned and the grounds put in the best of order. The train will arrive in Paducah on the 11th, two days later than the first report, and will inspect from Louisville to Paducah on the 12th. The train is run as a special and carries the superintendents, trainmasters and roadmasters of the many divisions of the road. Paducah has always been highly complimented by the inspectors and will spare no pains to make the same representation as of old.

Messrs. G. W. Smith and Joseph Baker, assistants to the general superintendent of Machinery William Renshaw, of Chicago, are in the city today on business. They are looking over the local Illinois Central shops prior to the annual inspection of the road by the inspectors. They will go east from here.

Mr. J. M. Taylor, the general storekeeper of the Illinois Central, of Chicago, is in the city today on business. Mr. Taylor has been paying a great deal of attention to the local storehouse of late and has inaugurated a new system of bookkeeping that has proven a great success.

Eddy McGuire, of Springfield, Mo., has accepted a position as dispatcher for the Illinois Central at Fulton to succeed Dispatcher Frazier, who is alleged to have been to blame for the Boaz wreck.

Mr. A. D. Brooks, the water supply man, returned to Central City this morning after a several days business trip to the city.

KILLED THREE.

AND THIS MAN MUST HANG FOR HIS CRIME.

Vanndale, Ark., Nov. 6.—David Cross, the self-confessed murderer of the three Gibson children at Wynne, was brought here by Sheriff Hammett and Judge Hughes hurriedly impaneled a jury. After three minutes' deliberation they returned a verdict of murder in the first degree. Sentence will be pronounced tomorrow. There were signs of mob violence, and it is confidently believed that the law will be allowed to take its course.

BOTTLE BURST.

PAINFUL INJURY TO JIM JONES AT LAEVISON'S.

Jim Jones, colored, an employe of the Laevison Bottling Works, met with an accident this morning. He was bottling soda pop when the bottle burst and cut his hand badly. One of the fingers was nearly severed from the hand. The injury was dressed by Drs. Hoyer and Robertson.

ACTUALLY SHED BLOOD

A FRENCH DUEL IN WHICH INNOVATION IS INTRODUCED.

Paris, Nov. 6.—The duel between the Count de Dion, president of the Automobile club and a prominent sportsman, and M. Gerault Richard of the Petite Reubique took place yesterday. M. Gerault Richard was wounded in the right arm.

The encounter occurred at Neuilly at 11 o'clock and lasted an hour. Despite the efforts at secrecy, a crowd of 150 persons, including journalists and photographers, were present. Ten exceedingly lively bouts were fought. Count de Dion was always on the aggressive. During the third bout Gerault Richard claimed to have touched the count, but the seconds did not allow the claim, which was repeated in the sixth. De Dion opened the tenth bout by fiercely attacking the point of his sword touching Gerault Richard on the inner side of the right forearm, causing a slight wound. The seconds immediately stopped the encounter. No reconciliation occurred, the participants leaving the field without the usual formalities.

FOX HUNTERS TO MEET.

The National Fox Hunters' Association meets at Bowling Green the week of November 10. A large crowd will be there from all over Kentucky, but Colonel Hobson, of the city, will probably not attend.

PREACHERS LEAVING

Several to go to Other Fields of Labor From Fulton.

Reported There is a Strong Sentiment in Favor of Rev. E. B. Ramsey.

Fulton seems to be having a difficult time keeping her ministers. The Lender says that Rev. Waits of the Christian church has already gone to Texas to reside and Rev. Turnley of the Baptist church will leave for Florida January 1. Rev. E. L. Moore of the Walnut street Presbyterian church has been called to pastorate a church at Houston, Tex., but it is not known yet whether he will accept. His plans will be made known Sunday. It is understood on reliable source that the M. E. church at Paducah want Rev. Ramsey of the Fulton M. E. church and at the next conference, which meets at Paris this month, they will endeavor to secure him. Rev. Ramsey, in an interview with a Leader representative Tuesday, said that he knew nothing about Paducah wanting him, but that if they did he did not know whether he would go or not. The question of the change of pastors of the M. E. church is entirely determined by the conference. Rev. Ramsey has made a splendid and successful pastor and the Fulton people would regret to lose him, but you can't tell what conference will do.

FALSE ARREST

A $1,000 DAMAGE SUIT FILED AT MURRAY.

Murray, Ky., Nov. 6.—Alfred Crocker has filed suit in the circuit court against E. H. Haley for $10,000 damaged, charging unlawful arrest. Some time ago Crocker was accused of cutting and ruining the rubber tires on a buggy belonging to Mr. Haley, and he alleges in his petition that Mr. Haley detained him without a warrant and unlawfully. Crocker was given a trial for the offense and plead guilty in the lower courts but owing to the fact that the court had no jurisdiction in the matter he was held to await the action of the grand jury.

IN THE MIDST OF FRIENDS.

A BANK PRESIDENT IS ACCIDENTALLY KILLED.

Leoti, Kas., Nov. 6.—Robert J. Traver, president of the First State Bank of Leoti, accidentally shot and killed himself at a supper given by the Order of Royal Neighbors. He lifted an overcoat belonging to a deputy sheriff from a chair and a revolver in one of the pockets was discharged.

The ball entered the right nipple and the wound caused death in less than an hour. Mr. Traver was wealthy and prominent in business and social life, a native of Clinton, Iowa and 40 years old.

JAMES' SECRETARY.

MR. TOM LOVELACE, OF FULTON, THE FORTUNATE YOUNG MAN.

Mr. Thomas H. Lovelace, of the Fulton Leader, is to be Congressman elect Ollie James' private secretary. Mr. Lovelace is one of the best known young newspaper men in Southwest Kentucky.

CAUSE OF BLACKNESS.

New York, Nov. 6.—Mystery no longer surrounds the strange discoloration which has turned black the lower limbs and part of the body of Patrick McGrath, a patient in Bellevue hospital. He is suffering from gangrene, caused, the doctors have decided, by a clot in one of the largest arteries of the body, above the hip, probably the aorta. Nothing can save his life.

PROMINENT LADY DEAD.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Nov. 6.—Mrs. Elizabeth Howell, mother of Commonwealth's Attorney W. R. Howell, died at her home, at Caledonia, 15 miles west of this city, of paralysis. She was 77 years old and a member of the Baptist church. Colonel Howell is her only surviving child.

STIRRED 'EM UP.

Sam Jones did his work in Paducah. He stirred up a racket and caused the city to elect half of its aldermen Republicans in spite of two Democratic papers that claim to know something about politics in that city.—Meyfield Messenger.

ALL WRONG.

THE MISTAKE IS MADE BY MANY PADUCAH CITIZENS.

Don't mistake the cause of backache. To be cured you must know the cause.

It is wrong to imagine relief is cure. Backache is kidney-ache. You must cure the kidneys. A Paducah resident tells you how this can be done.

Mrs. Martha Hamilton of 610 Tennessee street says: "I contracted a cold which settled in my kidneys. It brought on a severe attack of inflammation of the kidneys, and ever afterwards I was subject to pain across the back, although I used every precaution to prevent it. When the attacks were at their height I was prostrated and had to remain in bed for some time. One day I noticed Doan's Kidney Pills advertised for just such conditions as mine. It struck me that they might do me some good, so I procured a box at DuBois and Co.'s drug store. They helped me from the start. The dull aching across the small of the back finally disappeared, the pain in my muscles and legs and dizziness which accompanied it left and since I have been only too pleased to tell friends and acquaintances about the results I obtained from using Doan's Pills."

JAILER EVITTS

HE WILL HAVE MR. FRANK SMEDLEY AS DEPUTY.

City Jailer elect Tom Evitts has announced that he will make Mr. Frank Smedley his assistant when he goes into office January 1. This will not create a vacancy in the office of overseer of the chaingang, which Mr. Smedley now holds, as the assistant city jailer must have charge of the prisoners under the new ordinance.

It is probable that Lockup Keeper Menfee, who has been ill for several weeks past, will be appointed a police officer to take Mr. Evitts' place on the force when he assumes the duties of city jailer.

A DANGEROUS MONTH.

This is the month of coughs, colds and acute catarrh. Do you catch cold easily? Find yourself hoarse, with a tickling in your throat and an annoying cough at night? Then you should always have handy a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup. J. A. Anderson, 354 West Fifth St., Salt Lake City, writes: "We use Ballard's Horehound Syrup for coughs and colds. It gives immediate relief. We know it's the best remedy for these troubles. I write this to induce other people to try this pleasant and efficient remedy." 25c, 50c and $1 at DuBois, Kolb and Co.

NEW TRUSTEES

REMOVAL LIKELY TO RESULT IN VACANCIES IN SCHOOL BOARD.

The board of education will shortly have to elect three new trustees. There is already a vacancy existing in the sixth ward, from which Mr. T. J. Nichols moved, thus vacating the office. Mr. J. A. Bauer is expected to shortly move from the First ward into the E. W. Smith home at Eighth and Madison, which is in the Second ward, and Mr. Sam Jackson, elected from the Fourth ward, it is understood has moved into the third.

REMARKABLE OPERATION.

Chicago, Nov. 6.—After having carried a knife blade an inch and a quarter in length in his brain for twenty-two years P. J. Kent has undergone a successful operation for its removal. The blade had broken off in the skull and the point has been all these years inserted squarely into the brain.

TO ENJOY FOX HUNT.

Clerk George Catlett and Warren Hagermann of the Eddyville penitentiary, are expected this evening with a pack of hounds to join Colonel H. H. Hobson and other local hunters and enjoy a fox chase through the surrounding country.

WORM DESTROYER.

White's Cream Vermifuge not only kills worms, but removes the mucus and slime in which they build their nests; it brings, and quickly, a healthy condition of the body, where worms cannot exist. 25c at DuBois, Kolb and Co.

TENANT CUT

Marshall County Minister Claims He Was Assaulted.

The Others Say the Preacher Carved While Victim Was Not Looking.

Bad blood had existed between Rev. T. J. Walton of Benton, and C. J. Cann, a tenant on Rev. Walton's farm near Briensburg, Marshall county, since last spring, when it is alleged the minister chased the other man across a field with a shotgun.

Yesterday the minister was making another trip across the farm when another difficulty arose between him and Cann. He claims that Cann and three sons jumped on him and he was forced to use his knife to prevent being pulled off his horse. Cann was cut across the face and under a shoulder, but not seriously hurt.

The Canns claim that the preacher slipped up and did the cutting, when his victim was not looking. It appears that both men are somewhat eager to fight, and each has been in affrays before. Rev. Walton is out on bond awaiting the result of his tenant's wounds.

POPE LEO XIII.

HIS HOLINESS VIGOROUS DESPITE HIS 92 YEARS.

Rome, Nov. 6.—Pope Leo XIII, who was elected supreme pontiff February 20, 1878, today surpassed all his predecessors except Pope Pius IX. in his tenure of the pontificate. His holiness, who is 92 years old, maintains his usual health. He receives numerous visitors, to whom, however, he often refers to his inevitable approaching end. Two days ago, in bidding farewell to Cardinal Moran, archbishop of Sydney, N. S. W., who was starting for home, his holiness said, although for the sake of the archbishop's diocese he rejoiced that he was returning, he wished for Cardinal Moran's sake that he was remaining in Rome, as it would save him the trouble of returning for the next conclave of the college of cardinals.

A CIRCUS ROW.

RINGLING BROTHERS HAVING A HARD TIME IN TEXAS

Austin, Tex., Nov. 6.—State Revenue Agent J. D. Cunningham has instituted suit in behalf of the state of Texas in the district court here against Ringling Bros., proprietor of the circus of that name, for the recovery of $3,600 occupation taxes, alleged to be delinquent by the defendants to the state, and to restrain them from giving any more performances until the tax is paid. The point involved in the suit is, whether the occupation tax shall be collected on each of the two performances of the circus each day, or whether the two performances are to be considered as continuous. The Ringling Bros. take the latter view. The case was set for hearing tomorrow.

BEST LINIMENT ON EARTH.

I. M. McHany, Greenville, Tex., writes, Nov. 2, 1900: "I had rheumatism last winter, was down in bed six weeks; tried everything, but got no relief till a friend gave me a part of a bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment. I used it, and got two more bottles. It cured me and I haven't felt any rheumatism since. I can recommend Snow Liniment to be the best liniment on earth for rheumatism." For rheumatic, sciatic or neuralgic pains rub in Ballard's Snow Liniment; you will not suffer long, but will be gratified with a speedy and effective cure. 25c, 50c and $1 at DuBois, Kolb and Co.

INCREASE IN RAILWAY EARNINGS.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 6.—The estimated gross earnings of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway for October are $100,655.33 greater than for October, 1901. From July 1 to November 1 the increase has been $41,097.74 over the same period of last year.

GOOD ROADS CONVENTION.

The Good Roads convention at Lexington November 18 and 19 will probably be attended by Mr. Charles T. Harrison, of Washington, D. C., a special agent and road expert at the office of public road inquiries of the United States, department of agriculture. It is not known whether any one at all will attend from here or not.

Gentlemen,—Some people claim that colds cause more disease than anything else, but I am satisfied that stomach troubles, caused by the rapid life we are living, especially in a large, busy city like Chicago, is the cause of more disease and death than all else combined. I suffered for four years with liver trouble and biliousness, brought on through a distressed and over-loaded stomach, and nothing in the world helped me but

CIGAR HOLDERS DISAPPEAR

"Just watch the first 25 men who pass this door," said a well known dealer in cigars and smokers' articles yesterday afternoon, "and you will see that not one of them has a cigarette or a cigar holder in his mouth."

On being asked the reason for the decadence in the use of holders by smokers nowadays the dealer continued:

"It is hard to say why so few holders are now sold, but it's a fact. We have to keep a pretty well selected stock on hand, though, as you can see—pointing to a large showcase of meerschaum goods. I remember when the outfit of one young blood was complete without an amber or a meerschaum holder, either for cigarette or cigar. They were expensive luxuries, too. I have sold a three-inch cigarette holder of amber for $15. But the goods were beautiful. Often a holder would be made of pure amber, with bands of gold in the center and at the end. Some of them were encrusted with precious stones, one that I now have in mind having a diamond fly in the middle on top. Those were the days when men had their pipe hearts and wives sew chamomile around their meerschaum pipe bowls. Pipes, you know, are also on wane, and have been for the past years. There was great pride taken in the coloring of one's meerschaum pipe then, as well as great rivalry between smokers as to whose was being browned the quickest. German weichsel stems were in the meerschaum bowls, and an enjoyable smoke was the result.

"There were also beautiful cases for cigars and cigarettes. These, too, went to the point of extravagance in price. There were gold and silver cases made to fit in the hip pocket. On the front of the young dandies would have their initials cut, monogram fashion. Some of these sold for over $100. A great many of the college boys bought expensive cigarette cases, in fact they were our best customers. There were handsome cases in leather also, and these came cheaper.

"A tobacco store, of course, is not complete without its stock of smokers' articles, but as far as the sales go at present we could almost dispense with the goods. I used to lay in a stock in the fall that cost $1,500, perhaps. Now $50 worth of such goods will last me several years. Why is it? Why, all the things are fads, of course, and each has its day. Just now the cigar and cigarette holder are having a recess. I look to see them the fashion again, however, and then I will work off some of the dead stock I have.

"Snuff, you know, was also the rage, and then the rich found an outlet for their spare cash in the jeweled snuff boxes of the day. However, not every fellow could cleverly handle a snuff box, and moreover snufftaking is now considered, what it always was, a beastly habit.

"However, there is no falling away in the cigar and cigarette trade, and even though holders are not used we are still on hand will be, I suppose, until the end of the chapter."

The Clyde is due out of Tennessee tomorrow.

The John A. Wood is laid up at Middleport, O.

The Ten Broeck went up the Ohio river this morning for a tow.

The New Haven recently sunk in the Wabash river has been raised.

The Clifton left St. Louis last night and will report here on Friday morning.

The Memphis will pass out of Tennessee river en route to St. Louis Saturday.

Captain Archibald has bought the towboat J. B. A. at Evansville and will be used towing coal.

The Lyda has arrived here after having been hung up at Double Island on the Tennessee river. She will lay up for better water.

The Mary Stewart has gone aground at Sister's Islands. She was hung there yesterday and not able to get off. No later news has been heard.

The Carrville has not been seen here this week and it is thought must be broken down. She has all the Cumberland trade she can handle and has had a "good thing" during the low water.

The Henry Harley left last night for Tennessee river several hours late. She was delayed by deck labor, being unable to secure a full force of rousters. The negroes here will not work and the steamboat men can hardly secure enough deck labor to make half a full crew.

The Richardson will not be here today as she left Evansville late and is short deck labor. The Bob Dudley did not arrive here from Evansville until late last night, and departed at 11 o'clock on her return trip. The Richardson will probably get in early tomorrow morning.

Among the very few old time pilots who continue to stand a watch at the wheel and who live in Louisville are Captain Job Whysall and Captain Alex Evans. Both are remarkable men and have seen long service and they seem to be in condition to be here for some time to come.

The big scraper used by the towboat Fulton is an immense hoe made of iron and attached to the bow of the towboat. It is dropped into the mud or soft bank and dragged by the boat into the river, where it leaves from one to three cart loads at a time and shoved back to the bank as before by the boats to drag another big lot of mud into the river.

The Louisville and Evansville Packet company has mortgaged property, including several steamboats and wharfbots, for $110,000 to the Fidelity Trust and Safety Vault company. Five per cent gold bonds will be issued, 108 at the par value of $1,000 and 20 at the par value of $100. The right to retire the bonds within 40 years is reserved. Mr. W. W. Hite, president of the company, said that the mortgage was the result of a reorganization on November 1, the Louisville and Evansville Mail company passing out of existence and being succeeded by the Louisville and Evansville Packet company. He said there would be no change in the officers or business. Mr. Hite said the company had experienced a bad year, and took the only wise course—reorganization and raising money.

The local inspectors at Pittsburgh sent Captain Frank Dodd the following letter which explains itself: "After careful consideration of all the testimony in the charges filed against you by J. N. Rodgers for criminal neglect of duty, carrying and concealing on board spirituous liquors and drinking same to excess while in the performance of your duty and causing your steamboat to be steered over dam No. 1 on the Monongahela river with nine empty flats in tow, with an unlicensed man at the pilot wheel, at 6 o'clock in the morning of October 4, and wrecking the steamer Rebecca, of which you had command, to the extent of $10,000, we are satisfied that the charges preferred against you have been fully sustained by the witnesses whom we examined in the case. We this day suspend your license for a period of two years, commencing

FOLLOW OLD TRAILS

HIGHWAYS OF COMMERCE BUILT IN PIONEERS' PATHWAYS.

Spaniards Blazed Roads in California When the United States Was Struggling for Independence.

The early explorers and pioneers of the western part of the United States made the paths that are now the great railway highways of commerce. The old trails of the plains, deserts and mountains and the routes of the present transcontinental railways are closely associated, as in the greater number of cases the big western railroads followed the course of the wagon tracks of fifty years ago. When the American colonies were declaring their independence of Great Britain the "old Spanish trail" was being laid out by a party under the command of Francisco Silvestre Velez Escalante, in the interest of the Spanish missions in California.

This expedition left Santa Fe in July, 1776, and after traveling over what is now known as the San Juan country, reached a spot where Grand Junction, Col., an important present-day railway center, is located. From there the party "trailed" to Salt Lake and from there to Los Angeles, Cal. The new Denver & Northwestern railroad and the Salt Lake & Los Angeles line will closely follow much of this old Spanish trail.

The Union Pacific railroad runs over the old Platte-Overland route from Omaha to Ogden, and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe follows for many hundreds of miles the old Santa Fe trail, while in Arizona the same road touches at many points the southern overland trail. The Santa Fe trail runs through the Raton mountains (southern spurs of the Rocky mountains in New Mexico), and the engineers who built the Santa Fe railroad found many problems solved in the way of mountain railway construction by simply following the trail of the Spaniards of many years ago.

There are still to be seen along this trail Spanish houses that were built in the time when that part of the country was within Mexican territory, while there are also many roadhouses that fifty years ago dispensed cheer and comfort to the weary travelers who crossed the plains and mountains for the precious yellow metal.

The Rio Grande system follows the trails made by Gunnison in 1853-54. The Colorado Southern, from Fort Collins to Trinidad, Col., runs along the trail between Fort Laramie and Fort Union, and the Oregon Short line is built along the Oregon trail from Salt Lake to Columbia. The Central Pacific now owned by the Southern Pacific, runs from Ogden to San Francisco by a route that many years ago was traveled by Spaniards and Indians, across the northern end of the Great American desert and through the beautiful Sierra Nevada mountains.

From the snow-capped summit of the Sierra Nevada mountains to the green fields around San Francisco is a question of eight hours by the fast overland limited on the Southern Pacific, and along the route may still be seen the path or trail that years ago required many days of work and danger successfully to traverse. From Denver to Salt Lake City the Denver & Rio Grande railroad follows old trails and the Grand River, along which the wandering Mormons plodded on their way to the hoped-for haven of rest. Both the Rock Island and Union Pacific, says the New York Tribune, follow ancient trails, and the big Rock Island bridge at Omaha crosses the Missouri river from Council Bluffs at a point where the wealth seekers from the east, with their families, live stock and prairie schooners, used to ford the muddy stream.

SOMEWHAT TOO MUCH MUSCLE

How Scotch Lassie Rid Herself of Unwelcome Suitor.

A young Highland ploughboy was pestering a female servant with his unwelcome attentions, and one day he proposed. At this instant the pair (they were walking in the fields) came upon another servant, a man, sleeping instead of working. The lassie, a brawny wench, seized a stick and beat the idler till he roared. When he had slunk off to his duty the swain remarked, admiringly: "Ma, certie, lassie, but ye cud well manage yer childer."

"Aye, or their father," replied the girl, with a significant look. The lover turned pale.

"Ma lass," he gasped, "I juist remembered ma auld mither at hame. I'm her only laddie, and I think it's na richt for me tae mairry while she's alive. W—w—when she dees I'll come back and mairry ye."

And as he got safely away he said, fervently: "May the Lord alloo ma mither to live as lang as me!"

Remedy Was Simple.

An amusing story is told of a lady who had bought some new gas-burners with mantles. For a week or two the light was satisfactory; then it grew dim and dimmer until finally she sent for the gasfitter.

"It grows worse all the time," she explained.

"When was it put in?" asked the man.

"About a month ago."

"Ah, yes; I see."

ABOUT HEALTH BOARDS.

The opinion rendered by County Judge Lightfoot yesterday in the compulsory vaccination case tried to test the constitutionality of the law, is one that affects the people as a whole and at times may affect them individually. It is its relation to the public health and welfare that makes it worthy of notice. The Sun does not believe that it will be sustained by the higher courts. It is the opinion of a great many doctors and attorneys here as well as elsewhere that boards of health could not have existed this long if their arbitrary power in any way conflicted with the letter or spirit of the constitution of the state. It is known and has been known for many years that boards of health do at times have absolute power, because it has been deemed necessary under some conditions that they have. This power is undoubtedly abused a great many times, but it does not change the fact that the boards possess it. If they did not, the people would be left at the mercy of the ignorant and indifferent in times of epidemic or threatened epidemic, when nothing but prompt and drastic measures will prevent a spread of disease.

Judge Lightfoot's opinion seems to be based solely on the presumption that the lawmaking power is vested solely in the legislature, and that the legislature has no right to delegate that power to a board of health. This will be accepted as true, but the question then arises, has the board of health in the instance cited, made any law? In our opinion it has not. The only law there is, was made by the legislature, and is a law that prohibits the people from violating orders issued by the board of health. It can be readily seen why such a law is no more specific than it is, and why it is necessary. A legislature could not make a law or set of laws that would apply to all places and conditions in the state, and as these conditions and circumstances are often very urgent, and constantly changing, it empowers the board of health to issue whatever orders it deems necessary, and says that the people must obey such orders, for they are for the protection of society. This is the law made, and it is made by the legislature, which also prescribes the penalty. The rules or orders made by the board of health are not law. A law cannot be changed except by the legislature or the legislative body that made it. The rules of the health boards, which Judge Lightfoot, in order to give some semblance of reasonableness to his opinion, construes to be "laws," are nothing more than orders, and may be one thing today and another tomorrow, which could not be the case if they were "law." Any one knows that such rules cannot be laws, and that if they are not laws, then the board of health has not been invested with the power to make laws, and has made no laws in this instance. And if this is true, Judge Lightfoot's opinion is wrong, for it is based principally, as stated above, on the presumption that the board of health by authority of the legislature has made "laws" when the legislature had no constitutional right to grant it such power. It will be generally agreed with the judge that the board has no right to make laws, but it will not be agreed with him that the board in issuing an order to have children vaccinated made a "law." It simply issued an order, and the legislature says that when such orders are not obeyed the offender shall be fined.

Too many advertisers mistake their own consequence when advertising. This is seen in the bigness of the type which spells their names. There are some names, whose fame is continental. That is that it is that helps defeat questions of public policy here instead of allowing them to be decided on their merits. As long as ignorance and prejudice are allowed to predominate in the minds of voters on matters concerning the welfare of the general public, just so long will Paducah continue to lag behind.

Surely the judge does not know more than all the members of the legislature who framed the law, the eminent judges who have since passed on the various features of it, and many of the best attorneys of Kentucky. Only recently a court at Louisville decided that the board of health had a right to forcibly take a man to the pest house and keep him there, civil liberty, divine rights, and all. And he was taken there solely on an order of the board of health, and this court, which is higher one than Judge Lightfoot's, held that the board had the authority to do it. In other words, that court decided that the board of health can do almost anything it deems necessary. Judge Lightfoot decides that it can do practically nothing. The Kentucky board of health and the county board of health cannot afford to let the opinion stand.

WHY PADUCAH LAGS.

The process of educating the voters of Paducah to the needs of an up-to-date and progressive city seems to be very slow. It cannot hope to be otherwise as long as men of intelligence are so ignorant or so prejudiced on all public questions. The Democrats talk about the ignorant negro, and tell how he shouldn't be allowed to vote, but there are many of the better class of white men who go to the polls and vote on questions about which they are as ignorant as the negro. There may be some excuse for the negro. There is none for the white man. A member of the city council of Paducah actually did not know until the day before the last election that the Paducah water company's franchise has twenty years yet to run. He was of the opinion that its franchise expired in three years, when the city would have the company where he wanted it. He had been talking it about and doing great harm to the water proposition on the strength of his misapprehension, and yet he is a councilman. The day before election he learned that it is the water company's contract for some of the fire hydrants that expires in three years, which gives the company the advantage of the city instead of it being the franchise that expires, giving the city advantage of the water company. There is no telling how many votes this official's ignorance may have caused to be cast against the water company's excellent proposition.

It was learned that another man who had been working tooth and nail against the company left the question of the proposition's advisability entirely out of the campaign and opposed it simply because the water company once threatened to shut off his water because he didn't pay the rent. Another scrapper against the proposition was a man who signed a contract to pay for water if an extension of line was made, and when he later, when the line had been extended, wanted to back out, the water company forced him to comply with his contract. It is the same way with every public question that comes up in Paducah.

These little things are cited simply to show what it is that helps defeat questions of public policy here instead of allowing them to be decided on their merits. As long as ignorance and prejudice are allowed to predominate in the minds of voters on matters concerning the welfare of the general public, just so long will Paducah continue to lag behind.

'boy wonders' of the Democratic side of the house, will not be a member of the next congress. What has happened to rob the public service of this rising young Kentucky statesman, nobody seems to know. It will be recalled that Mr. Wheeler distinguished himself at the last session by violently assailing Prince Henry of Prussia, which royal personage was then nearing these shores as the kaiser's emissary and the nation's guest. In a lurid burst of eloquence the Kentuckian denounced the emperor's brother as a 'little Dutchman,' and from the depths of his haughty Democratic soul declared that he would not honor this scion of Old World monarchy by shaking his hand when he arrived here. In a word, Mr. Wheeler despaired utterly of the continuance of republican institutions by reason of the fact that the prince of Prussia had been invited to visit this country as the nation's guest, and it is suggested that the Kentuckian has retired to private life to prepare for the crash and wreck which he believes are impending.

For the enlightenment of the inquiring correspondent it is stated that Congressman Wheeler is now at home in Paducah, Ky., enjoying a lucrative practice as attorney for one of those soulless, oppressive and infinitely sordid corporations that Congressman Wheeler and other wonderful products of the modern Democracy are so confident have undermined the welfare and prosperity of the nation. And he seems to be doing well, and doubtless in time will develop one of those evidences of growing prosperity that require an enlarged vest and shirt front, and will forget the days he used to have to make Prince Henry speeches and skin the trusts and corporations for the placation of a clamorous, bloodthirsty constituency down in the Gibraltar district.

If the Republicans helped put Mayor Yeiser in office, which he and his friends claim, why doesn't he accord them a modicum of recognition by appointing at least one of the four Republican aldermen-elect to one of the three vacancies on the aldermanic board? If he does not he may find it somewhat embarrassing when he goes to his Republican friends next year and asks them to vote for him.

The News-Democrat says the Republicans of Paducah were guilty of "trickery and deceit" in the municipal campaign just closed. This is rather unexpected. We are surprised at the Republicans! The inventive genius of the N-D's oracle seems to be back at the old stand working overtime.

The defeat of Boies in Iowa knocks into a cocked hat the claim of the Democrats that Speaker Henderson withdrew because he was afraid of defeat. There was never the slightest prospect of his being defeated. He would doubtless have won even easier than his successor did.

"The cow is the idol of Paducah and the hog of Graves county. The hog law is thought to have been defeated in this county," says the Mayfield Messenger. It might have been added that the cow law is thought to have been defeated in Paducah also.

It will be a sad day when the Democrats can't scrap over something. Before the election they scrap over prospects and after the election over the true reason they were so badly beaten.

If Paducah only had a few more Democratic papers the Republicans might have elected all eight of the aldermen.

A MYSTERIOUS CASE

Pastor and a Missionary Found Dead in Each Others Arms.

They Had Been Asphyxiated in the Minister's Study—Dead Several Hours.

NO EXPLANATION LEFT

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 6.—Clasped in each other's arms, lying on the floor of the pastor's study in the German Baptist church, Oscar Berndes, janitor of the church, discovered the dead bodies of Rev. W. C. Rabe, pastor, and Augusta Busch, a missionary and assistant to the pastor.

Death had been caused by asphyxiation. The room was filled with gas, a jet and a burner of a small stove being partly turned on.

The woman's head was on some cushions. They had evidently late in that position for several hours. There seem to be little doubt that death was accidental.

It is believed that the pair had fallen asleep, the stove flame blew out and the gas escaped. The bodies were rigid and stiff and death had evidently occurred during the early hours of the previous evening.

Each failing to return home during the night occasioned a search for them. The janitor went to the pastor's study and found the door locked and the key on the inside. From a crack beneath the door he smelled the escaping gas. He summoned a police officer, and the door was broken open. In the center of the very small study the bodies lay, the heads just a few feet from the door. The woman's face was covered with froth, and had begun to turn purple. One gas jet above the pastor's table was partly turned off and from a stove gas was slowly escaping. The door from the study opening into the auditorium of the church was slightly open, and the auditorium was filled with gas. The officer notified the coroner and the remains were taken to the morgue.

It was thought at first the two had committed suicide, for on the table was an open letter, a neatly arranged bouquet, the preacher's watch and glasses and his hat, Miss Busch's gloves and handkerchief, and her jacket neatly folded on the back of a chair. The room was ordered as though it had just been cleaned. The letter was written in German, and when interpreted was found to be an answer to another letter which Rev. Rabe had received. There was nothing in it to indicate that the two had intended taking their lives.

To Miss Ottolie Noerling particularly was the death of the two a shock, and she was almost prostrated. Miss Noerling is about 18 years of age, and arrived in Omaha on a morning train from Louisville, Ky., en route to Denver. She stopped off for a few days to visit Miss Busch. She arrived at the room of the dead woman just as the news was taken there that she was dead.

A CHURCH FAIR IN A BARROOM.

From the Atlantic Monthly.
I said we had the church fair at the Silver Dollar. We had most things there, dances, town meeting and the kinetoscope exhibition of the Passion Play. The Silver Dollar had been built when the borders of Jimville spread from Minton to the red hill the defiance twisted through. "Side-winder" Smith scrubbed the floor for us and moved the bar to the back room. The fair was designed for the support of the circuit rider who preached to the few that would hear and buried us all in turn. He was the delivery of Jimville's respectability, but he was of a sect that held dancing among the cardinal sins. The management took no chances on offending the minister; at 11:30 they tendered him the receipts of the evening in the chairman's hat, as a delicate intimation that the fair was closed. The company filed out of the front door and around to the back. Then the dance began formally with no feelings hurt. These were the sort of courtesies, common enough in Jimville, that brought tears of delicate fanner laughter.

TOWN IS EXCITED

A Grudge Results in the Death of Three Men.

Marshal Jordan Shot Down to Enable a Prisoner to Escape From Him.

ONE MAN ESCAPED

Orange, Texas, Nov. 6.—As the result of previous trouble, Will Harris, a young man, yesterday afternoon shot and killed Jeff Chenault, emptying the contents of a double-barreled shotgun into him. Harris ran and escaped the fire of Chenault's brother, but was caught by City Marshal Jordan, who was close at hand. While Jordan was on his way to the jail he was shot down and Will Harris escaped. No one knows who fired the shot which killed Jordan, though there were a large number of people on the street near the jail at the time. The officers have a suspicion, and are after the man.

When Jordan fell Will Harris jerked away and took refuge in a private residence, where the sheriff got him a short time after and lodged him in jail. Jim Harris, a brother of Will, began raising a row and Sheriff Robertson started for him, but Harris made a run on his horse and went to a store a short distance away, where he was handed a gun and cartridges by Tony Jones, who then got into his buggy and started to drive away. The officers were only a short distance behind Harris and saw the gun handed to him. When Jones started to drive off they fired on him, inflicting wounds from which he died in the course of a short time. Jim Harris escaped.

The town was greatly excited and there appeared a prospect of further trouble. The sheriff has ordered the saloons closed and kept closed until he gave permission for them to open again. The streets are crowded tonight but there does not appear to be much likelihood of further trouble. Jordan was only recently appointed city marshal to succeed Marshal Jett, who was killed in the discharge of his duty.

VIVEROS ESCAPES AGAIN.

GOVERNOR GENERAL OF PANAMA GETS AWAY FROM THE REBELS.

Panama, Nov. 6.—The governor general, Viveros, who was made a prisoner at Tamac in 1901 and taken from there by the rebel general Herrera to Agua Dulce, whence he escaped in January of this year, to be captured again at the second battle of Agua Dulce, has again escaped from the rebels. He reached Panama this morning.

Gen. Viveros brings information that Gen. Morales Berti, who surrendered to Gen. Herrera at Agua Dulce, Gen. Gomez and other veteran officers are now being held at Chiriqui, where they suffered much from the privations of captivity.

Gen. Herrera's army at present consists of 5,000 men, including the government prisoners, who have been incorporated in it. The rebel army, according to Viveros, is encamped from Agua Dulce to Chiriqui.

LONDON PLEASD.

London, Nov. 6.—In banking and commercial circles here gratification is expressed at the election results in the United States. Prices on the stock exchange opened strong, Americans being a dollar above parity, but subsequently they ceased. There was considerable buying for New York account.

WEST VIRGINIA REPUBLICAN

Wheeling, W. Va., Nov. 6.—Both First and Second congressional districts are sure Republican. Dooner,

JUDGE WAS ANNOYED

OLD GENTLEMAN DREW THE LINE ON POKER FOR DRINKS.

Had Played the Game With Ulysses S. Grant and William Tecumseh Sherman and Was Too Old to Learn New Ways.

The late Judge Treat was a gentleman of the old school, and held by the manners and customs of the rapidly disappearing code of a former generation. An amusing story of his views on what he sometimes characterized, with more of humor than of cynicism as the degenerate methods of a decadent day, is told by his friends in Rochester. The judge was joyfully admitted to membership in one of the most exclusive clubs in that city, and soon after his election appeared at the clubhouse and began to make himself accustomed to his surroundings. He wandered from room to room, and at last passed into the apartment reserved for cards. Three or four tables were filled up, and the judge stood by and watched the game. Suddenly he started precipitately toward the door, and, going downstairs, met one of the board of governors.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said the judge with dignity and elaborate courtesy, "I would like to obtain a little information from you, if you can spare me the time without inconvenience."

The club officer was delighted to answer any question.

"Well, sir," the judge began, "I am naturally curious about the way in which this club is run. I am a new member, sir, and feel that such should be my first duty. I was passing through the cardroom just now, sir, and paused beside a table at which five gentlemen were engaged in a game of what appeared to be poker."

"But, my dear—," began the club officer, raising his hand deprecatingly.

"Pardon me again, but if you will kindly allow me to finish, sir," said the judge. "I overheard one gentleman say: 'I bet you $20.' Another gentleman observed, 'I will see that, and go you $50 better,' and another said, 'I'll raise that $100.'"

"My dear Judge, that was nothing I assure you—," again broke in the officer with a laugh of forced lightness upon his lips. He was getting nervous, for the club had a high reputation for its moral tone, and upon gambling and the suspicion thereof it turned its face resolutely.

"I beg you, sir, to excuse me," the judge continued, "but I was naturally interested in that conversation. Now, sir, I would like to ask you, sir, if those gentlemen were in earnest."

"By no means, Judge," hastily spoke out the club officer. "They were playing what we call freeze-out, and the man who goes broke the first has to buy the cigars or the drinks. You'll enjoy it, I'm sure, Judge."

The judge rose to his full height.

"I will enjoy it, sir, do you say, sir?" he thundered to the astonished governor of the club's reputation. "I take the liberty of differing with you, sir. I have learned what I was seeking for. You have given me the desired information. Sir, I have played poker with Ulysses S. Grant and with William Tecumseh Sherman, sir; and by God, sir, I am not going to play it now for the cigars and the drinks at my age, sir."

And he stalked out.—Rochester (N. Y.) correspondence of St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

GOT SOMETHING OF HIM.

Colored Preacher's Presence of Mind Good in Emergency.

Uncle Buck Taylor, a veteran negro preacher, who is a character in Rappahannock county, Va., is the hero of a story that sent the column from Liden, that state. In the midst of old-fashioned Baptist meeting Crooked Run, he was interrupted by a terrifying description of hell by a pretentious young negro, who he thought Uncle Buck's ideas were worthy of intelligent consideration, and told the congregation that education had killed off such notions of the hereafter. The old man recovered himself, however, and, when his opponent had resumed his seat, went on:

"Le'me tell yo' one thing—all yo' ahre mo' worthy of Hebbin' mo' shuah up it than that sem'ly nigger. 'Pared to him, we ahre all as shuah up hebbin as I am shuah up kill dat fly!'"

The pulpit shook as his big hand descended on the Bible, he peered forward, looked scared a moment, and then, a boyish gleam spreading over his face, the old man genially exclaimed:

"Dam! he didn't done git it, but I—I got his eyelash, brudder sisters!"

FOOD THAT MAKES IT A PLEASURE.

"I have a large amount of laborious brain fatiguing work to do," writes a young lady from Richmond, Va. "After returning from the office, I have found myself so completely exhausted that I was unable to engage in any recreation or amusement.

"I tried several expensive tonics without effect, and finally noticing an advertisement of Grape Nuts as a food recommended to brain workers, I purchased a package and tried it. I found it extremely palatable and after a week's use—two meals of it a day—I noticed a general improvement in my condition, the feeling of extreme exhaustion was growing less, and strength visibly increased.

"I began to put on flesh and felt ready to enter into the amusements of the other members of the family, and now, after using the food for eleven months, I am like a new person. I have absolutely no sensation of fatigue; my brain is clear; eyes bright; skin rosy and healthy, and my muscles have strengthened to a marked degree. I am now able to walk from the office home, a distance of three and a half miles, up one of the steepest hills for which our city is famous, and to engage in any amusements that may come in my way, without any sensation of extra fatigue.

"I am also using your Postum Food Coffee with excellent results. My sister-in-law, who lives in Norwalk, Conn., writes me that she uses it also, and has not suffered from the distressing sick headaches she formerly had."

HE SHOT THE HAT.

A Custom in Oklahoma That Saves
Time in a Sandstorm.

"A whole lot of ideas with which we grow up change when we get into another country," said a New York man who has just come back from a three-months' trip in the Southwest. "Now, one of the things we have heard of all our lives is that if a man's hat blows off he is a fool to run after it, for there is always somebody around polite enough to pick it up and hand it to the owner, if he has to walk a block to do it.

"I have seen it done. I have read about it more times than I have had hats.

"But it is not the custom at Reno, Oklahoma. I was sitting on the veranda of the hotel in that town, watching the various articles which one of those sandstorms whirled through the air.

"The hat of a citizen was raised and carried against a place on the other side of the street. A strapping fellow, who had been picking his teeth with a match, whipped out a navy revolver and fired a shot at the hat, nailing it to the fence.

"The owner came up, pulled the hat from its impalement, waved his hand at the man on the veranda and proceeded on his way.

"It saves time running after it," said the man on the veranda, "and it don't hurt the hat."

THOUGHT HE MIGHT BE SAVED.

Servant Girl's Answer Not Flattering to Methodist Divine.

This story is told of the Rev. C. W. Millard, who is presiding elder of the New York conference.

For several years he had a servant in his family who was a devoted Roman Catholic. Her love and devotion to them made the question of salvation a serious one.

One day as Mary passed through the doctor's study he looked up and said:

"If I should die to-night, Mary, what would become of me?"

And thinking seriously for some minutes, she replied:

"An, shure, I don't know, but I think the Lord would save you for your ignorance."

Shad Changed Their Homes.

Shad are very scarce in Connecticut waters this summer, but appeared in large numbers in the Ohio river, a profitable catch having been made within five miles of Cincinnati. Before 1876 shad were never caught in the Ohio. The first one taken in that year was considered such a curiosity that it was sent to the Smithsonian institution.

MAGAZINE

[Copyright, 1901, by C. B. Lewis.]

There had been established at Kalabag a great depot of supplies for the use of the British army invading the Afghanistan states, and five miles out of the town and among the hills was situated the big powder magazine. It was a great building of stone, and during active operations it contained half a million pounds of powder and other explosives. When my regiment marched up to Kalabag to relieve the Fourth of the line, there was a truce, and this ended in a treaty of peace; so that we saw no fighting. We were detailed to guard the depot, and it came about that I was placed in charge of the powder magazine with a guard of fifteen men. As the magazine was so far from the other depots and its situation so lonely and its guard so small, one would have expected it to be given the most attention by the hill men, but they gave us no trouble. Now and then we caught sight of a native on the hills around, and now and then he screamed defiance and fired a bullet against the walls, but it would seem as if they had orders to let the guard alone. I got to thinking matters over one day and with the aid of the sergeant, who was a bright sort of fellow, came to the conclusion that the guerrillas had some sort of trick up their sleeve.

We had fortified our camp among the hills, but it was commanded from a dozen elevations, and a hundred guerrillas could have carried it with a rush any night. I believed they had kept clear of us for a purpose and that a big surprise would sooner or later turn up, but the only thing I could do was to wait for it. I figured that if any attack was made it would be under cover of darkness, but I was not quite enough for the hill men. They came with a rush one afternoon at 3 o'clock, and before any of us knew what was up they had possession of the camp and magazine. There were twenty-eight of them, and instead of shooting us down they contented themselves with tying our hands behind our backs and putting a guard over us. They put out scouts and sentinels in the direction of the town, and then twenty-four elephants that had been brought down a ravine close to the camp were driven up to be loaded with powder. They had the door open in a minute, and they worked rapidly and intelligently in loading the elephants. Each was loaded with eight kegs or twelve bags of powder, and when every elephant had his burden eighty of the men picked up a keg apiece and started off to the north. The two officers in command waited until all the others except our three guards had gone, and I was wondering if we were to have our throats cut when one of them approached me and smilingly said:

"There is to be war again, and we wanted your powder. I am almost sorry to go away and leave you alive, but as no one has been hurt and as we have made a grand haul I shall spare you."

The guards remained with us for half an hour longer and then departed at a swift pace, and it was not long before one of the men worked a hand loose and then freed the rest of us. It was a big thing those hill men had accomplished, and nothing could have been more neatly done, but as I stood in the open door of that looted magazine I almost wished they had put an end to me before they left. Our brigadier was a fiery tempered old chap, ready to criticize and censure a subordinate, and I knew that I was in for a court martial and a disgraceful dismissal from the service. It was my despair and desperation that gave me a sudden idea. They had neither destroyed nor taken away our arms, and I would follow on their trail with my guard of fifteen men. It was a forlorn hope, and I could not see how any advantage was to come of it, but we set off soon after the guards were out of sight, and within an hour we caught sight of the elephants as they topped a distant ridge. Fearing no pursuit, the hill men had left no rear guard, and when we reached the ridge we looked down upon a stirring scene. The powder was being divided to go in different directions. There were at least 300 men, 100 horses and ten or fifteen more elephants. There was a great deal of whooping and yelling as the loads were divided, and the force was so strong that I gave up any hope of attack and wished that I had at once reported at headquarters. I was about to give the order to retire when a big puff of smoke suddenly leaped a hundred feet into the air and there was a boom as if from a big cannon. The puff was almost instantly followed by a second and a third and then by one so large that it seemed to cover the whole valley. As this latter shot upward every man of us on his feet at the time was flung down and rolled over and the bowlders around us were rocked or moved from their beds. The crash that followed was something terrific and was heard sixteen miles away.

For ten minutes a pall of black smoke hung over the valley. When it cleared, we saw half a dozen horsemen and three or four elephants hurrying away. Some carelessness had exploded a keg or bag of powder, and a general explosion had followed. Down there lay 258 dead and blackened and mutilated natives, ninety-five horses and twenty-seven elephants, and by order of the brigadier they were heaped up and burned in one grand pyre. Our powder had been lost, but the natives had not reaped the benefit of it, and because of my pursuit, though it had accomplished nothing, I escaped.

THE WITCH ANGEL

[Original.]

There is a German legend of a girl who would accept no suitor who could not outrun her. Lithe and fleet as she was, she could not have distanced and tired out the many young fellows who accepted the test had she not been a witch. At least this is as the legend has it, though it is possible for a girl built for a race to run very fast. Bertha Gerhart was very slender, her muscles were hard, and she was tall for a woman, having great length of limb from the knee to the hip. Her face, without animation while at rest, when she was being chased by a suitor grew bright, her eyes glistened, and her lips wore a perpetual smile. She was continually looking back, and when she did so her pursuer started on with increased speed. In this way the girl led him to follow her so long as any strength remained to him, so that at last, when he sank down beaten in the race, he was in danger of death from exhaustion.

A number of young fellows had run the race with her only to be tired out, while Bertha's endurance seemed to give her greater fleetness the longer she ran. After one of her pursuing suitors had died of heart failure the baron on whose domain she lived shut her up in a tower in his castle and, upon the representations of her neighbors that she was a witch, decided that she should be burned at the stake.

The baron had a son, Oswald, slightly lame, a great student. Knowledge is the best means of dispelling the mists of superstition, and Oswald ridiculed the charge of witchcraft. He gained access to Bertha's cell, fell in love with her and, his passion being returned, begged his father's permission to marry her. The baron was horrified and, in order to separate his son from the witch, ordered him to go for a course of study to the University of Paris. But Oswald was so obstinate and made his father so much trouble that the baron, who was growing old and consequently weakening, finally consented to a compromise. Oswald proposed to demonstrate that Bertha was no witch by chasing and catching her himself. The baron only yielded to such a risk after his son had declared that if not successful the connection, so far as he was concerned, should be ended. The baron also insisted that Bertha should be told that if she escaped this suitor she should be set at liberty and troubled no further. If caught, she must die at the stake. In this way the father hoped to escape a witch for a daughter-in-law.

The race came on. While waiting for the signal to start, Bertha stood a dozen yards in advance of her suitor, looking at him with melancholy eyes, remembering that this the only man she had ever loved she must escape or lose her life. Oswald, who, with the exception of his lameness, was of a beautiful figure and face, threw all the love he felt into a pleading look which said, "Yield to me and—death!" When the baron drew his rapier, the signal, the runners started, Bertha stepping off slowly, but nimbly, like a fawn, Oswald with a limping gait, showing plainly that it would be impossible for him to catch her unless she permitted.

Bertha ran on, always leading her lover by a few rods, and it seemed that, like her former suitors, he was sure in the end to sink down exhausted. The onlookers, more than ever convinced that the girl was a witch, appealed to the baron to put an end to the unequal contest. And now they saw Oswald draw his dagger, the hilt of which resembled a cross, and hold it up before Bertha's eyes.

"He's showing her the cross," said the people. "If she is a witch, she will sink down at once."

But Bertha only looked the more melancholy out of her eyes, casting them upward, as if in prayer. Then Oswald pointed the dagger at his heart.

"If she's a witch," the people said now, "she'll throw a spell upon him to make him drive it into his breast."

But Bertha, when she saw it was her life or her lover's that must be given up, slackened her pace, running slower and slower, Oswald creeping nearer, till at last she stopped, tottered and fell back into his arms.

Then a great shout arose: "She's an angel from heaven come down to bless the young heir to the barony!"

"I have given my life for yours," said Bertha in despair.

"You have saved your life by your proffered sacrifice and will be my bride."

The baron was pleased both at the devotion of the girl for his son and at that son's wisdom. Now that he was satisfied that she was not a witch he welcomed Bertha as a daughter and proclaimed many days of festivities for the wedding. As soon as it was consummated he turned over the care of his estates and the welfare of his vast tenantry to Oswald, who, though beloved before, was now adored by them. Bertha spent her life in discovering and ministering to their wants and soon came to be as much beloved as her husband. Many a person accused of witchcraft appealed to her, and many a one was saved by her interposition from a horrible death at the stake. She at last came to be called the Witch Angel.

Arms and The Woman

By Harold MacGrath

Copyright, 1900,
By Harold MacGrath.

"Jack, for a man who has associated with the first diplomats of the world, who has learned to read the world as another might read a book, you are surprisingly unadept in the art of dissimulation."

"That is a very long sentence," said I in order to gain time enough to fathom what she meant. I could not. So I said, "What do you mean?"

"Your whole face was saying to the princess, 'I love you!' A glance told me all. I was glad for your sake that no other woman saw you at that moment. But I suppose it would not have mattered to you."

"Not if all the world had seen the look," moodily.

"Poor Jack, you are very unlucky!" Her voice was full of pity. "I feel so sorry for you, it is all so impossible. And she loves you too."

"How do you know?"

"I looked at her while she was looking at you."

"You have wonderful eyes."

"So I have been told. I wonder why she gave you that withered and worn eaten rose?"

"A whim," I said, staring at the rug. I wondered how she came to surmise that it was Gretchen's rose? Intuition perhaps.

"Do you love her well enough," asked Phyllis, plucking the lace on her fan, "to sacrifice all the world for her, to give up all your own happiness that she might become happy?"

"She never can be happy without me—if she loves me as I believe. I admit that this was a selfish thought to express."

"Then why is it impossible, your love and hers? If her love for you is as great as you say it is, what is a king, a prince or a principality to her?"

"It is none of those. It is because she has given her word, the word of a princess. What would you do in her place?" suddenly.

"I?" Phyllis leaned back among the cushions, her eyes half closed and a smile on her lips. "I am afraid that if I loved you I should follow you to the end of the world. Honor is a fine thing, but in her case it is an empty word. If she broke this word for you, who would be wronged? No one, since the prince covets only her dowry and the king desires only his will obeyed. Perhaps I do not understand what social obligation means to these people who are born in purple."

"Perhaps that is it, Phyllis, listen, and I will tell you a romance which has not yet been drawn to its end. Once upon a time—let me call it a fairy story," said I, drawing down a palm leaf as if to read the tale from its blades. "Once upon a time in a country far from ours there lived a prince and a princess. The prince was rather a bad fellow. His faith in his wife was not the best, and he made a vow that if ever children came he would make them as evil as himself. Not long after the good fairy brought two children to her godchild, the princess. Remembering the vow made by the prince, the good fairy carried away one of the children, and no one knew anything about it save the princess and the fairy. When the remaining child was 2 years old, the princess died. The child from then on grew like a wild flower. The prince did his best to spoil her, but the good fairy watched over her just as carefully as she watched over the child she had hidden away. By and by the wicked prince died. The child reached womanhood. The good fairy went away and left her. Perhaps she now gave her whole attention to the other." I let the palm leaf slip back and drew down a fresh one, Phyllis watching me with interest. "The child the fairy left was still a child for all her womanhood. She was willful and capricious; she rode, she fenced, she hunted; she was as unlike other women as could be. At last the king, who was her guardian, grew weary of her caprices. So he commanded that she marry. But what had the fairy done with the other child, the twin sister of this wild princess? Perhaps in this instance the good fairy died and left her work unfinished, to be taken up and pursued by a conventional newspaper reporter. Now this problem, fairy ascertained that the good fairy had left the lost princess in the care of one of a foreign race. Having a wife and daughter of his own, he brought the princess up as his niece, not knowing himself who she really was. She became wise, respected and beautiful in mind and form. Fate, who governs all fairy stories, first brought the newspaper reporter into the presence of the lost princess. She was a mere girl then and was selling lemonade at—25 cents a glass. She—"

"Jack," came in wondering tones, "for mercy's sake, what are you telling me?"

"Phyllis, can you not look back, perhaps as in a dream, to an old inn where soldiers and ministers in a hurry and confusion moved to and fro? No; I dare say you were too young. The Princess Hildegarde of Hohenphalia is your sister."

"My sister, the princess? I a princess? Jack," indignantly, "you are mocking me! It is not fair!"

"Phyllis, as sure as I stand before you all I have said is true. And now let me be the first to do homage to your serene highness," taking her hand despite her efforts to withdraw it and kissing it.

"It is unreal! Impossible! Absurd!" she cried.

"Let me repeat the words of the French philosopher who said, 'As nothing is impossible let us believe in the absurd,'" said I.

"And does she know—the Princess Hildegarde? My sister? How strange the word feels on my tongue."

"No; she does not know, but presently she will."

Then Phyllis asked in an altered tone, "And what is all this to you that you thrust this greatness upon me, a greatness, I assure you, for which I do not care?"

I regarded her vaguely. I saw a precipice at my feet. I could not tell her that in making her a princess I was making Gretchen free. I could not confess that my motive was purely a selfish one.

"It was a duty," said I evasively. "And in what way will it concern the Princess Hildegarde's affairs—and yours?" She was rather merciless.

"Why should it concern any affair of mine?" I asked.

"You love her, and she loves you. May she not abdicate in my favor?"

"And if she should?" with an accent of impatience.

Phyllis grew silent. "Forgive me, Jack!" impulsively. "But all this is scarcely to be believed. And then you say there are no proofs."

"Not in the eyes of the law," I replied. "But nature has written it in your faces." I was wondering why she had not gone into raptures at the prospect of becoming a princess.

"It is a great honor," she said after some meditation, "and it is very kind of you. But I care as little for the title as I do for this rose." And she cast away one of Pembroke's roses. It boded ill for my cousin's cause.

The next person I saw was the chancellor.

"Well?" I interrogated.

"There can be no doubt," he said, "but"—with an expressive shrug.

"Life would run smoother if it had fewer 'buts' and 'ifs' and 'perhapses.' What you would say," said I, "is that there are no proofs. Certainly they must be somewhere."

"But to find them," cried he.

"I shall make the effort. The pursuit is interesting."

The expression in his eyes told me that he had formed an opinion in regard to my part. "Ah, these journalists!" as he passed on.

Everything seemed so near and yet so far. Proofs? Where could they be found if Wentworth had them not? If only there had been a trinket, a kerchief even, with the Hohenphalia crest upon it! I shook my fists in despair. Gretchen was so far away, so far!

I went in search of her. She was still surrounded by men. The women were not as friendly toward her as they might have been. The prince was standing near. Seeing me approach, his teeth gleamed for an instant.

"Ah," said Gretchen, "here is Herr Winthrop, who is to take me in to supper!"

It was cleverly done, I thought. Even the prince was of the same mind. He appreciated all these phases. As we left them and passed on toward the supper room I whispered:

"I love you!"

CHAPTER XX.

When I whispered these words, I expected a gentle pressure from Gretchen's fingers, which rested lightly on my arm. But there was no sign, and I grew troubled. The blue green eyes sparkled, and the white teeth shone between the red lips. Yet something was lacking.

"Let us go into the conservatory," she said. "It was merely a ruse of mine. I want no supper. I have much to say to you."

Somehow we selected by mutual accord a seat among the roses. There was a small fountain, and the waters sang in a murmurous music. It seemed too early for words, so we drew our thoughts from the marble and the water. As for me, I looked at, but did not see, the fountain. It was another scene. There was a garden in which the roses grew in beautiful disorder. There were a man and a woman in the garden. She was culling roses, while the man looked on with admiring eyes.

"Yes," said the princess, "all that was a pretty dream. Gretchen was a fairy, and now she has gone from your life and mine forever. My dear friend, it is a prosaic age we live in. Sometimes we forget and dream, but dreams are unreal. It is true that God designs us, but the world molds us and fate puts on the finishing touches."

She was smiling into my wonder-struck face. "We all have duties to perform while passing. Some of us are born with destinies mapped out by human hands. Some of us are free to make life what we will. I am of the first order, and you are of the second. It is as impossible to join the one with the other as it is to make diamonds out of charcoal and water. Between Gretchen and the Princess Hildegarde of Hohenphalia there is as much difference as there is between—what smile shall I use, the possible and the impossible?"

"Gretchen," I began.

"Gretchen?" The princess laughed amusedly. "She is down. I beg you not to waste a thought on her memory."

Things were going badly for me. I did not understand the mood. It brought to mind the woman poor Hillars had described to me in his rooms that night in London. I saw that I was losing something, so I made what I thought a bold stroke. I took from my pocket a withered rose. I turned it from one hand to the other.

"It appears that when Gretchen gave me this it was as an emblem of her love. Still I gave her all my heart."

"If that be the emblem of her love, Herr, throw it away. It is not worth the keeping."

"And Gretchen sent me a letter once," I went on.

"Ah, what indiscretion!"

"It began with 'I love you' and ended with that sentence. I have worn the writing away with my kisses."

"How some men waste their energies!"

"Your highness," said I, putting the rose back into my pocket, "did Gretchen ever tell you how she fought a duel for me because her life was less to her than mine?"

The Princess Hildegarde's smile stiffened, and her eyes closed for the briefest instant.

"Ah, shall I ever forget that night!" said I. "I held her to my heart and kissed her on the lips. I was supremely happy. Your highness has never known what a thing of joy it is to kiss the one you love. It is one of those things which are denied to people who have their destinies mapped out by human hands."

The princess opened her fan and hid her lips.

"And do you know," I continued, "when Gretchen went away I had a wonderful dream?"

"A dream? What was it?" The fan was waving to and fro.

"I dreamed that a princess came in Gretchen's place, and she threw her arms around my neck and kissed me of her own free will."

"And what did she say, Herr?" Certainly the voice was growing more like Gretchen's.

I hesitated. To tell her what the dream princess had said would undo all I had thus far accomplished, which was too little.

"It will not interest your highness," said I.

"Tell me what she said. I command it!" And now I was sure that there was a falter in her voice.

"She said—she said that she loved me."

"Continue."

"And that as she was a princess and—honor bound it could never be."

I had to say it.

"That is it; that is it. It could never be. Gretchen is no more. The princess who you say came to you in a dream was then but a woman!"

"Aye, and such a woman!" I interrupted. "As God hears me I would give ten years of my life to hold her again in my arms, to kiss her lips, to hear her say that she loved me. But, pardon me, what were you going to say?"

"Your dream princess was but a woman. Ah, well, this is Tuesday! Thursday at noon she will wed the prince. It is written."

"The devil!" I let slip. I was at the start again.

"Sir, you do him injustice."

"Who, the prince?" savagely.

"No, the—the devil!" She had fully recovered, and I had no weapon left.

"Gretchen, did you really ever love me?"

There was no answer.

"No; I did not believe you did. If you had loved me, what to you would have been a king, a prince, a principality? If you broke that promise, who would be wronged? Not the king, not the prince."

"No, I should not have wronged them, but," said the princess, rising, "I should have wronged my people, whom I have sworn to protect; I should have wronged my own sense of honor; I should have broken those ties which I have sworn to hold dear and precious as my life; I should have forsaken a sacred duty for something I was not sure of—a man's love!"

"Gretchen!"

"Am I cruel? Look!" Phyllis stood at the other end of the conservatory. "Does not there recur to you some other woman you have loved? You start. Come, was not your love for Gretchen pique? Who is she who thus mirrors my own likeness? Whoever she is she loves you. Let us return. I shall be missed."

"You are breaking two hearts!" I cried, my voice full of disappointment, passion and anger.

"Two? Perhaps, but yours will not be counted."

"You are"—

"Pray do not lose your temper," icily. And she swept toward the entrance. I had lost.

As the princess drew near to Phyllis the brown eyes of the one met the blue green eyes of the other. There was almost an exclamation on Phyllis's lips; there was almost a question on Gretchen's; both paled. Phyllis understood, but Gretchen did not, why the impulse to speak came. Then the brown eyes of Phyllis turned their penetrating gaze to my own eyes, which I was compelled to shift. I bowed, and the princess and I passed on.

By the grand staircase we ran into the prince. His face wore a dissatisfied air.

"I was looking for your highness," he said to Gretchen. "Your carriage is at the curb. Permit me to assist you. Ah, yes," in English, "it is Herr Winthrop! I regret that the interview of tomorrow will have to be postponed till Monday."

"Any time," said I, watching Gretchen, whose eyes widened, "will be agreeable to me."

Gretchen made as though to speak, but the prince anticipated her.

"It is merely a little discussion, your highness," he said, "which Herr Winthrop and I left unfinished earlier in the evening. Good night."

On the way to the cloakroom it kept running through my mind that I had lost. Thursday? She said Thursday was the day of her wedding. It would be an evil day for me.

Pembroke was in the cloakroom. "Going?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Well, let us go together. Where shall it be, Egypt or the steppes of Siberia?"

"Home first," said I. "Then we shall decide."

"One more unfortunate. Make no deep scrutiny!" he quoted. "Jack,"

"As for me, I shall go back to elephants and tigers. It's safe."

she wouldn't think of it, not for a moment. Perhaps it was a trifle too soon. Yes, she is a princess, indeed. As for me, I shall go back to elephants and tigers. It's safe."

"The Bridge of Sighs," said I. "Let us cross it for good and all."

"And let it now read 'Sighs Abridged.' What do you say to this proposition, the 10th, the bears and the wolves? I've a friend who owns a shooting box a few miles across the border. There's bears and gray wolves galore. Eh?"

"I must get back to work," said I, but half heartedly.

"To the devil with your work! Throw it over. You've got money. Your book is gaining you fame. What's a hundred dollars a week to you and jumping from one end of the continent to the other with only an hour's notice?"

"I'll sleep on it."

"Good. I'll go to bed now, and you can have the hearth and the tobacco to yourself."

"Good night," said I.

Yes, I wanted to be alone. But I did not smoke. I sat and stared into the flickering flames in the grate. I had lost Gretchen. To hold a woman in your arms, the woman you love, to kiss her lips and then to lose her! Oh, I knew that she loved me, but she was a princess, and her word was given, and it could not be! The wind sang mournfully over the sills of the window; thick snow whitened the panes; there was a humming in the chimneys. She was jealous of Phyllis. That was why I knew that she loved me. And the subtle change in Phyllis' demeanor toward me; what did it signify? Gretchen was to be married Thursday because there were no proofs that Phyllis was her sister. What if Gretchen had been Phyllis and Phyllis had been Gretchen. Heigho! I threw some more coal on the fire. The candle sank in the socket. There are some things we men cannot understand—the sea, the heavens and woman. Suddenly I brought both hands down on my knees. The innkeeper! The innkeeper! He knew! In a moment I was rummaging through the stack of time tables. The next south bound train left at 3:20. I looked at the clock; 2:20. My dress suit began to fly around on various chairs. Yes; how simple it was! The innkeeper knew. He had known it all these years. I threw my white cravat on to the table and picked up the most convenient tie. In ten minutes from the time the idea came to me I was completely dressed in traveling garments. I had a day and a half. It would take 20 hours to fetch the innkeeper. I refused to entertain the possibility of not finding him at the inn. I swore to heaven that the nuptials of the Princess Hildegarde of Hohenphalia and the Prince Ernst of Wortumborg should not be celebrated at noon Thursday. I went into the bedroom.

"Pembroke."

"What is it?" came drowsily.

"I am going on a journey."

"One of those cursed orders you get every other day?" he asked.

"No. It's one on my own account this time. I shall be back in 24 hours. Goodby."

My brow was damp; my hands trembled like an excited woman's. Should I win? I had a broken cigar in my pocket. I lit the preserved end at the top of the feeble carriage lamp. I had the compartment alone. Sleep! Not I. Who could sleep when the car wheels and the rattling windows kept saying: "The innkeeper knows! The innkeeper knows!" Every stop was a heartache. Ah, those eight hours were eight separate centuries to me! I looked careworn and haggard enough the next morning when I stepped on the station platform. I wanted nothing to eat, not even a cup of coffee to drink.

POLICE COURT

Chicken Killers are Fined Heavily in Judge Sanders Court.

The Mobley Saloon Case Again Continued—Other Cases.

Judge Sanders assessed several heavy fines this morning and had one case that attracted some little attention.

This was the case against Rufe Minor, Musie Robertson, Sam Barker and Will Henderson, all colored youths which resulted in a fine for each of the defendants amounting to $20 and costs. The boys went hunting in the Brown addition to the city yesterday and shot at some chickens, killing one. They were warranted by the owner of the fowls and although there could have been three warrants issued against them, for shooting in the city limits, petty larceny and disorderly conduct only one was issued. The case against Malinda Gilbert colored for using insulting language was dismissed. It had been on the docket for several weeks.

The case against J. W. Mobley the saloon keeper of South Third street for breach of ordinance was continued again until Saturday. He is charged with running two saloons with license for only one.

Katie Powell and Georgia Stone colored who had a fight were arraigned on a breach of the peace warrant. The former was fined $30 and costs and the latter dismissed.

Will Taylor and Aaron Berry white were fined $3 and costs for a breach of the peace.

Henry York and J. W. Wise white were fined $1 and costs for drunkenness.

CIRCUIT COURT

JURY IN THE RACHEL DAVIS CASE DISCHARGED.

This morning the jury in the Rachel Davis against the Paducah Street Railway Co., case, was dismissed on account of being unable to agree.

The jury stood eight to four in favor of giving the plaintiff a verdict. She is the negro who was injured in a car accident on the 8th of August several years ago. This is the second time the case has been tried. It was tried once before and the defendants got a verdict. The case was then appealed to the court of appeals which reversed the lower court's action.

A suit was filed this morning in circuit court by Samuel M. Stewart against Charles Johnson and others for the sale of property and the distribution of the proceeds.

The case of Langstaff Orme M'fg Co. against Katterjohn was dismissed.

A judgment for $211.75 was filed for the plaintiff in the case of Newcomb Bros. Wallpaper Co., against L. P. Balthazar.

At press time the case of Norman, Miles and Co., against T. Herndon was still on trial. The first witness is still on the stand. The court will probably be on this case until the end of the week, it is predicted.

DANISH WEST INDIES.

ONLY ONE-FIFTH OF THE STOCK SUBSCRIBED FOR—PROMOTERS DOWN-CAST.

Copenhagen, Nov. 6.—The time for subscribing to the stock of the Danish West Indian Company expired today. Of the about $1,000,000 nominal capital only one-fifth was subscribed for, notwithstanding the advertisement given to the concern by King Christian and Crown Prince Frederick taking stock. The promoters, who are anti-salers, are downcast over the weakness of the sentiment in favor of the aiding of the Danish West Indies. The leaders of the movement intend to appeal to King George of Greece, Queen Alexandra and the Dowager czarina of Russia to buy shares.
